

Rowena Cory Daniells has been involved in Speculative Fiction for over thirty-five years -- as a reader and fan, independent press, graphic artist, bookshop owner and writer. She is published in both children and adults' fiction.

Her award winning fantasy trilogy 'The Last T'En' was published in Australia, the US and Germany. She also writes short stories, which have appeared in magazines and anthologies including 'Dreaming Downunder' which won World Best Fantasy, and 'Dreaming Again'. Her agent is John Jarrold.

Rowena has a Masters in Arts Research and has taught creative writing to all ages. Over the years, she has served on the management committees of national genre awards, and several state and national Arts Organisations. She lives by the bay with her husband and varying combinations of her 6 children as they come and go. In her spare time she has devoted five years to studying each of these martial arts, Tae Kwon Do, Aikido and Iaido, the art of the Samurai sword.

With *The Chronicles of King Rolens' Kin*, Rowena set out to write the kind of book that you curl up with on a Saturday afternoon after a hard week. She hopes you have as much fun reading the trilogy as she had writing it.

Her new fantasy trilogy *The Outcast Chronicles* is due out in 2012.
